MEDICAL APPLICATION OF SCIENCE FOR HEALTH

CENTRAL LOUISIANA AHEC LSUA

Medical Application of Science for Health (M.A.S.H.) is a FREE summer program offering high school students interested in health careers an opportunity to learn how the basic sciences taught in high school relate to medical theories, diagnosis, careers and treatments. Students will learn about health career options and participate in class lectures, case studies, and lab exercises that focus on forensics, facial reconstruction, DNA analysis, blood typing, an ER scenario, a mock malpractice trial and more.

This program is designed for students who have career goals and a commitment to their academic work. It is an intense college level class condensed into a 2-week time period that allows students to earn 3 hours of course credit for the Introduction to the Health Care System (HESC 1003) and Client Care Interactions (HESC 1004) courses directed by the LSU Alexandria Allied Health Department. Students are expected to study, take tests and perform at their highest academic level.

Class is held in June (typically the first 10 days, M-F) from approximately 8:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. at the Allied Health building in downtown Alexandria. Students are required to commute to class throughout the duration of the program and responsible for their own transportation to the building.

Completed ONLINE application MUST include:

- Completed application (all sections complete)
- Prior completion of at least (1) Central Louisiana AHEC program (AHEC of a Summer, Day with the Doctors, CI:Healthcare, or Dash into Dentistry)
- One letter of recommendation from your teacher, counselor, or high school principal
